

LEO M. FRANK KIDNAPPED AND LYNCHED BY MOB

POSSE OF ARMED MEN FORCE WAY INTO PRISON TO DRAG JEW FROM CELL

CONVICTED SLAYER OF MARY PHAGAN IS HANGED TO A TREE IN SIGHT OF HER HOME AT DAYBREAK TODAY.

FIND BODY EARLY TODAY

No Shots Fired By Crowd of Silent Men Who Take Law and Justice Into Their Own Hands—Remains Taken to Atlanta.

Atlanta, Ga., Aug. 17.—Leo M. Frank, serving a life term for the murder of Mary Phagan, the Atlanta factory girl, and who was taken from the prison farm at Milledgeville last night, was lynched two miles east of here today by an armed party, which took him. He was hanged to a tree.

Frank was brought one hundred miles from the prison farm to a point almost within sight of the former home of Mary Phagan. No shots were fired.

Frank's body, barefooted and clad only in prison trousers and shirt, was found at 8:30 o'clock this morning. It is believed he was lynched about daylight.

It is believed that the body had been found spread rapidly and within a short time hundreds of persons were crowding to the scene. No immediate effort was made to cut the body down.

Frank's body was not cut down until 10:15 o'clock. One of the crowd addressed the mob advocating mutilation of the body.

Left to Coroner. Another pleaded immediately with the throng to allow an inquest to take its proper course. A vote was suggested and taken.

It was overwhelmingly in favor of allowing the coroner to take charge of the body. The inquest was held at the outskirt of the city refused to affirm or deny that they had arranged to take it.

Prison Officials Overpowered. "I was called to the door just as I was preparing to go to my cell," said the superintendent of the state prison farm today. "When I passed the threshold two strong men grabbed me and snatched me out of my cell. I was taken to a place where two men with shotguns and two with heavy pistols, I remonstrated and they declared it was no use for me to squirm, as they were going to come for Leo Frank and were going to go."

LEO M. FRANK.

Stanton's Opinion. San Francisco, Aug. 17.—Former who as chief executive of that state committed to life imprisonment, the death penalty passed on Leo M. Frank, and who is visiting the exposition, expressed himself as follows in regard to the lynching of Frank.

"The act was a constant outrage, and every man engaged in the lynching should be hanged, for he is an assassin. Such an act is contrary to the civilization of Georgia and one which every good citizen will condemn."

"I am shocked and horrified beyond expression. Any man who approves of this action of the mob of murderers is unworthy to be a Georgian."

"A man of my position, which is not for me, Governor Stanton's action was indeed courageous and wise. Just how sagacious, the near future I hope, will more than amply demonstrate."

"I am now gradually adjusting myself to the new environment. My health is much better. I expect to improve both physically and mentally. The past and his staff are both kind and solid. After a breathing space we will again take up the fight which will eventuate in vindication and liberty."

Parents Mourn. New York, Aug. 17.—When Rudolph Frank and his wife, parents of Leo M. Frank, learned definitely here today that their son had been hanged at Marietta, Ga., they drew the shades at all windows of their home in Brooklyn and refused to answer door bell or telephone. Neighbors said the Frank family had begun an eight-day period of mourning, which was customary in Jewish religion.

Early callers at the Frank home were met by Otto Stern, Frank's brother-in-law. He said Mr. Frank and his wife were asleep and had not been told of the kidnapping of their son. Stern said he learned of the matter in the newspaper. Within two hours the family received word that Frank's body was found hanging to a tree.

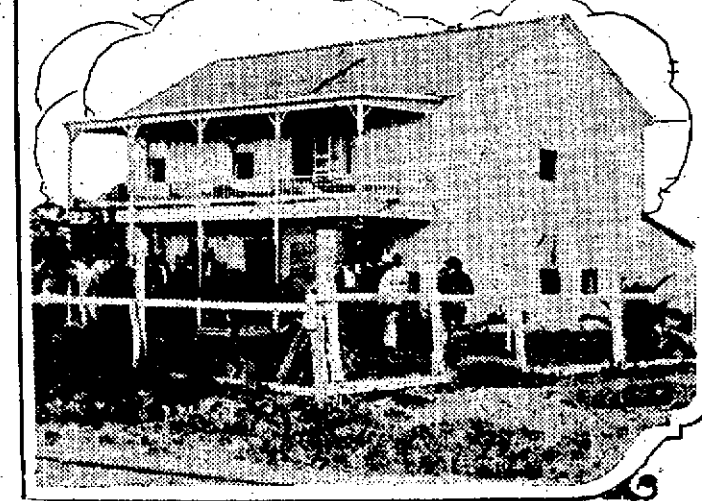

Frank Handled Roughly. "One of the prisoners who witnessed the scene declared four men took Frank by his arms and legs, while a fifth grabbed him by the hair and he was dragged out and humped down the stone steps. While I looked on Frank did not utter a word, but apparently was suffering intensely and groaned from pain inflicted in handling him in his wounded condition."

AMERICAN RANCHERS KILL MEXICAN BANDITS IN TEXAS BATTLE

Texas cowboys with dead Mexicans tied to their lassoos; house used as fort by ranchers.

In an encounter at Las Nosias, Texas, between American ranchers and Mexican bandits who outnumbered the former four to one, the Americans took refuge in the ranch house shown in the lower picture and held the Mexicans at bay until help arrived in sufficient numbers to drive the bandits off. After the battle, which lasted two hours, during which there was a steady fire on each side, five of the Mexican bandits were found dead on the battlefield. The upper photo shows the cowboys with some of the dead Mexicans tied to their lassoos, just before they hauled them to their burial place.

GALVESTON SUFFERS BIG STORM DAMAGE

MONDAY'S HURRICANE OVER GULF COAST CALLED WORST STORM IN FIFTEEN YEARS.

ENTIRE CITY FLOODED

Five Feet of Water Covers Streets of Texas Coast City—All Wires Down—Roads Washed Out.

Galveston, Texas, wireless to Fort Sam Houston and telephone to San Antonio, 10:09 a. m., Aug. 17.—Galveston today had passed through one of the worst storms within the past fifteen years and now is ready to repair the damage done by last night's hurricane.

Five feet of water stands in the city and is slowly draining off. Two fires started today are yet to be placed under control.

The transport McClellan late last night broke from its moorings and drifted half a mile out to sea. The commercial wireless station at Port Arthur is out of commission and the big aerial masts at Port Crockett here are down.

Southern Texas Isolated. Dallas, Tex., Aug. 17.—With the cities and towns of southeast Texas isolated from the rest of the world and one of the worst tropical hurricanes of a decade wearing itself out over the coastal prairies, the fate of Galveston today was not known, though it is believed the storm center had passed inland slightly west of the island city.

Houston, Beaumont, Galveston and a group of lesser towns are cut off and isolated from the rest of the world. The commercial wireless station at Port Arthur is out of commission and the big aerial masts at Port Crockett here are down.

MEXICANS MOBILIZE ALONG RIO GRANDE

BORDER SITUATION CONTINUES CRITICAL WITH GATHERING OF BANDITS NEAR BROWNSVILLE

AWAIT PEACE REPLIES

Washington Does Not Expect a Favorable Answer From Carranza to Pan-American Proposal.

Brownsville, Texas, Aug. 17.—The border situation along the lower Rio Grande assumed a threatening aspect today. There was a gathering of Mexicans in force last night on the Rio Grande thirty miles above Brownsville, and their daring attack across the river on troops of the 13th U. S. cavalry was not the only aggravating feature of the situation.

For nearly twenty miles about Progresso crossing alarms were sounded by rifle shots and by bells last night. Armed men patrolled roads; women and children were gathered where they could be guarded. Early today more troops reached Mercedes and the Progresso section. They were infantry from the 26th regiment, which reached here yesterday from Texas City. They were starved and exhausted.

Held Mexicans Back. Last night's twenty minute fight at Progresso was forced entirely by Mexicans on the Mexican side of the Rio Grande, and no Mexicans succeeded in getting through. The American army patrol in United States territory. This was reported today to Colonel Robert L. Bullard, commanding officer of the Brownsville district. Colonel Bullard strengthened the patrols about Progresso and Mercedes yesterday afternoon so there are eight hundred cavalry and infantry in that vicinity.

Reports from Mercedes stating that more than 150 Mexicans had crossed into Texas under cover of this night, proved unfounded.

Washington Awaits Answers. Washington, Aug. 17.—Responses to the Pan-American appeal calling upon the Mexican factional leaders to end their civil strife, still were being awaited by state department officials today. No replies had reached the state department early today, although both General Carranza and Villa had received the communication.

Fry, made public here today by the state department, accepts the proposal that damages be fixed by a mixed commission and that a disputed treaty provision be submitted to arbitration at the Hague, but calls on Germany for a statement as to whether she intends to conduct her future naval operations in accordance with her interpretation of the Prussian-American treaty or those of the United States.

The note is regarded as putting the noted case well on the way to a settlement. It is addressed by Secretary Lansing to Ambassador Gerard at Berlin.

Plans are being made to organize a large Wisconsin delegation to the national encampment at Washington to be held in conjunction with the national encampment of the G. A. R. in late September. TRANSPORT ROYAL EDWARD CARRYING 1,350 SOLDIERS SENT DOWN BY SUBMARINE IN AEGEAN SEA.

SIX HUNDRED RESCUED

Official Announcement Indicates That Nearly One Thousand Persons Were Lost—Troops Bound For Dardanelles.

London, August 17.—The British transport Royal Edward has been torpedoed and sunk by a German submarine. Announcement to this effect was made officially today. 600 men were saved out of 1350 troops and 220 other persons on board. The statement says:

"The British transport Royal Edward, was sunk by an enemy submarine in the Aegean sea last Saturday morning. According to the information at present available, the transport had on board thirty-two military officers and 1350 troops in addition to the ship's crew of 220 officers and men. The troops consisted mainly of reinforcement for the 29th division and details of the royal army medical corps."

"Full information has not yet been received, but it is known that about 600 had been saved."

Mars British Record. The British admiralty's record of transporting great numbers of troops to the various fighting zones without the loss of life, so far as reported officially, has been broken after more than a year of war. The torpedo of a submarine has been found the mark, and the transport Royal Edward has gone to the bottom in the Aegean sea with a loss of life which may reach 1,000. The brief admiralty announcement shows that the Royal Edward was engaged in transporting troops to the Dardanelles from where Australians and New Zealanders have been largely employed.

The Royal Edward was 11,137 tons register, and 325 feet long. She was engaged in the trans-Atlantic trade and was owned by a Toronto firm.

Struggle on East Front. In the land fighting a crisis has not been reached in the present stage of the eastern campaign. Grand Duke Nicholas, the Russian commander-in-chief, will not be able to assure the safety of his armies until the menace presented by the advance of Field Marshal Von Hindenburg, in Courland, is removed. In the Bansk district of Courland, the German army has been driven backward to the Asa river. The chief struggle, however, centers in the region north of the Niemen, notwithstanding the recent successes of Russian resistance. Between the Niemen and the Bug the German drive evidences a certain amount of headway, although Petrograd claims attacks of the invaders in this region have been repulsed after heavy fighting, along the middle, but the Germans have forced several crossings.

Another Transport Sunk? Philadelphia, Aug. 17.—Reports brought over on the American liner Dominion, which arrived yesterday from Liverpool, were to the effect that the American liner Merion, requisitioned by the British admiralty as a troop ship, had been sunk by the fire of Turkish batteries at the Dardanelles.

The Merion took out from Liverpool for the Dardanelles a general cargo of food supplies and many soldiers, being practically a troop ship. She was in charge of Captain Hickson, an officer of the British naval reserve force, who succeeded Captain Hill, her former commander.

MARY PICKFORD IS INCOMPARABLE

Lovable Film Star Constantly Surprises Audiences With Her Roles.

Mary Pickford has proved without dispute that there is but one Mary Pickford. In a touching and beautiful character, that of Glad, the little waif of the slums, she has won the hearts of the darkest hours never loses her faith in the Supreme Being, she attains a degree of power in "The Dawn of Tomorrow" which was presented on the Paramount program at the Apollo theatre. What is becoming known as a Mary Pickford crowd.

The role of Glad is that of a picturesque, lovable little philosopher, groping timidly for help from an unseen power and demanding positive proof of the existence of an Almighty, whom she but vaguely comprehends. The story tells how Glad resolutely turns her back on unprofitable yesterday, keeps her eyes on the cheerful tomorrow and brightens her own and many other lives till she really earns her name. "If there's anything yer want, jes' keep on askin' and you're pretty likely to get it."

BOY KNOWN IN MONROE LOST IN NORTHERN WOODS

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE)
Monroe, Wis., Aug. 17.—Word has been received here of the disappearance a week ago of Wilbur Soper, 8 year old son of Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Soper, of Birchwood, Wis., and nephew of Mrs. Rudy Kunder of this city. The lad, with a number of neighbor boys, went into the country, and shortly upon reaching their destination told the boys he was going home. Nothing has been seen of him since. The country in that vicinity is a vast forest and it is thought the lad was either lost in the woods or drowned in one of the lakes. Bloodhounds have been put into use and two clairvoyants consulted, but to no avail. Between fifty and seventy-five residents of Birchwood have been searching day and night since his disappearance.

POLICE TAKE VAGRANTS FROM THE RIVER JUNGLES

Monday afternoon, the police made a raid along the river banks near what is known as the "first sand bar" or "jungle" and arrested half a dozen vagrants of a hobo camp. All were frisked in the hope of finding a transient that might be guilty of some of the robberies here last week. Nothing that would excite suspicion was found on them. Roy LeRoy, Dave Coughlin and Joe Ryan, three of them, were arraigned on drunkenness and vagrancy charges this morning. LeRoy was given thirty days in jail and the other two in default of fifteen dollars fines.

When told of the report, Chief Champion laughed and said: "If burglars could find that much money and any diamonds at my residence, I would help them look for it; and what's more, I would be willing to split on all the diamonds they could find."

There will be a period of poverty after the war. There will be no necessity for poverty, and such poverty as there is will be due to misapplication of the productive powers which will be available. It will be the poverty which comes from wasted resources and not from inadequate resources. There will be no return to pre-war prices. That means that there will be a permanent readjustment of our methods. There will have to be a permanent rise of wages and other permanent readjustments to meet the higher prices. The proper policy for the trade unions is to accept the war bonuses; not for the duration of the war, but for the duration of the higher prices.

MAKE MUCH PROGRESS IN THE INSPECTION OF STATE NURSERY STOCK

Madison, Wis., Aug. 17.—With five deputies in the field, the work of the new state entomologist, J. G. Sanders, in inspecting and cleaning up the nursery stock and orchards of the state is making satisfactory progress. Mr. Sanders has started on an overland tour to the Milwaukee nursery district, extending from Waubesa to the lake shore. His deputies will make their trips by automobile throughout the nursery sections of the state. This method will be not only a great time saver, but an economical method of traveling from one locality to another.

ITALIAN MOTHER MAY HAVE TO LOSE CHILD

Court Fails to Find Relief for Alleged Neglected Wife—Appeals to Have Daughter Sent to Sparta.

Maria Gulick came to this country from sunny Italy a few years ago, coming with her husband, who worked on the section gang on the Chicago Milwaukee & St. Paul railway in Janesville. His American name was plain Frank. The Italian couple had a pretty, dark skinned and eyed daughter about four years of age. While Frank worked on the section at $1.25 per day, the family was happy.

The meager wages was almost sufficient to give the Gulick family their wants and when Frank worked every day during the week or overtime, the family had a luxury. The mother could afford to buy a few words in English but she was happy. Sure, did not she have clothes, enough to eat, and a place to sleep and in America, her husband did not have to shoulder a gun and march away to war as he would in the native land.

But Maria's happiness was doomed to disappointment, for in May Frank packed his "dunder" on their little home and disappeared. Work was slack and the wages from only three days a week do not go far in supporting three and besides furnishing food, clothing and other necessities on hand. So Frank went to Chicago, and his wife was left without a cent.

Frank Palmer the section foreman, the champion of the foreigners in the city, took pity on the plight of the woman and bartered Maria and her pretty little daughter in his home, his wife aiding them the best under the conditions. Palmer swore out a warrant for Gulick's arrest and she was brought back from Chicago and jailed in court on desertion charges. The neglected wife had little to say—she promised her marriage vows had promised her love and support. She sat in the court, mild eyed while the small daughter, dressed in her neat, with her big black eyes sparkling and shining, her face all aglow from the strange surroundings. The clerk knew enough of American court to hire a lawyer and the attorney secured an adjournment on the case and the mother was left alone.

A few weeks later Frank Palmer brought in the report that Gulick had "ducked" again and had not returned to work as he had promised to the court when arraigned. From what can be gathered, Gulick left within a few days after being released from under the stern hand of the law. The case is set for the 26th, on the individual court day in the meantime what has become of Maria.

When Frank departed for the second time, she was left to the support of friends, and one noteworthy fact of the Italian lady's life is that she will make to a fellow countryman in distress. Maria did not suffer from the dire want of food or shelter but from the want of a home. There is a gloomy outlook. Clothes must be bought for the pretty little daughter and she must be sent to the American school to become a truly American.

Mrs. Gulick stopped with a family named Gagnier on South Fifth street. Being unversed in American ways and unskilled in American labor, she could not obtain work that would enable her to support her daughter and her mother. She spends her spare time in knitting tiny clothes that brings tears to her eyes. Recently she applied to Point Anderson to have the smiling little daughter sent away from her mother's arms to an unknown school at Sparta. She cried loud and hard—but what could she do? The little girl would be a burden to her. Superintendent Anderson did not wish to separate the child from its mother to be taken to the state institution unless this was the last resort from dire necessity. Maria wants a job, not a hard one because her health will not permit it, but one that will prevent the losing of her daughter. Any mother would be proud of the reputation of such a pretty, lovable little child.

SIXTEEN NEW SENATORS TO BE ELECTED BEFORE THE NEXT LEGISLATURE

Madison, Wis., Aug. 17.—The seats of sixteen members of the state senate are to be filled by election before the next legislative session. Many will probably be candidates to succeed themselves. Eight have strong progressive tendencies. The list of outgoing senators follows:

Senators: Chicago Falls, W. J. Biecher, Beloit, Otto Bosshard, La Crosse, Timothy Burke, Green Bay, H. M. Culbertson, Medina, L. E. Cunningham, Beloit, Robert Glenn, Wausau, W. P. Kuhlow, River Falls, W. Stevens, Rhineland, George H. Weissleder, Milwaukee, Robert W. Monk, Nellisville, W. L. Richards, Milwaukee, George L. Rogers, River Falls, W. Stevens, Rhineland, George H. Weissleder, Milwaukee.

It is rumored that Senator Glenn may be the candidate for re-election owing to impaired health. It is said that Henry E. Roethe, "legionaire" candidate for governor a year ago, of Fenimore, has his eye on the seat. Senator Rogers may not be a candidate. He is being strongly urged to become the progressive candidate for governor on the republican side. Senator Richter has been repeatedly mentioned as a possible democratic candidate for governor, but during the last few days of the session emphatically declared he had no designs for that office. Senators Richards and Weissleder are prominent opposition in the primaries should they be candidates again, according to reports here. Should Atorney General Cullen be a candidate for the supreme court, it is possible that Senator Skogmo will become a candidate for attorney general. It is conceded that Senator Burke, who has served in the legislature for twenty years, will be a candidate for re-election.

HOW TO BUILD A BANK ACCOUNT

WOMAN'S PAGE

SIDE TALKS

By RUTH Y. CAMERON

HOW CAN THEY AFFORD IT?

One day last week I received a printed folder from a shop where I trade, advertising a summer sale.

The next day I went in town to try, and avail myself of some of the mark-downs listed in that folder.

There were several gowns marked down from twenty-five to twelve dollars and I asked the gracious looking saleswoman who smiled smilingly towards me where I could find these gowns.

How I was rebuffed for answering that advertisement. The graciousness, the smile and the smile simultaneously disappeared. She led me languidly toward the rack and with a supercilious gesture indicated the gowns. She did not inquire my preferences; she did not in any way try to serve me. She simply stood back and eyed me indifferently, giving the rack a casual whirl now and then.

I had asked for mark-down goods. I was plainly in her eyes a person not worthy of courtesy or attention.

Now this incident if it were unique would not be worth mentioning. But it is not unique. On the contrary, it is characteristic. Much this sort of thing has happened to me again and again when I have shown my interest in mark-downs advertised in either the newspapers or the printed folder.

How Can The Employers Afford It?

What puzzles me is how the employers can afford to let their employees act that way.

The advertising folder which I had received was a ten-page affair. It had several cuts and must have cost hundreds of dollars to set up, print and send out. And yet here was the invitation nullified by the reception the customers were in danger of receiving if they accepted it.

The employer was becoming customers with his right hand and pushing them away with his left—surely a costly proceeding.

I Am A Great Admirer Of The Saleswoman.

Mind you, I am not criticizing saleswomen as a class; on the contrary, I have the greatest admiration for their patience, their courtesy and their marvelous taste and ability in driving to gowns themselves so well. Moreover, I know that they are often exasperated by customers who are out to shop rather than to buy. Nevertheless, as I have said before in this column, I think that there are a great many of them who lack the sympathy they ought to have with the woman who has to consider the pennies.

And if I were an employer I should explain very clearly to my employees that I did not want the drawing power of the money that my employees were advertising nullified by their superciliousness toward the customers who responded to that advertising.

Glimpses of Married Life

By Mrs. Eva Leonard

"Go down to Kansas City yourself, mother, and look the situation over. That will give you a better idea than anything I can tell you." The family were sitting in solemn convulsion and each was presenting his or her own question of the shares of oil stock.

I can't leave very well just in harvest," objected the old lady. "You let me run the house, mother. I have developed into quite a capable farm woman, and father and I can keep a house beautifully while you and Dick look into oil affairs."

"And if we are to have a father?" Nell turned a pouting face to the silent, gray-haired man at her side.

"I'm sure we could do nicely," he answered, patting her shoulder. "Now, mother, get ready and I'll take you to the morning train."

"Where is Casey?" She was examining a folder. "The new well is there, I see."

"It's a few miles this side of Kansas City. The wells are right by the track. The railroad made the company construct an expensive oil tank before they struck oil," explained Dick.

"Humph! Were they afraid they would have their tracks washed out with the oil?" he asked the old lady. "Well, if you think you can get along with the work, Nell, I'll do. Something has got to be decided at once."

"Good! That suits us, mother; we'll get back to Fairport on the late train tomorrow night, and you can come on home and I'll get down to business the next day."

So it was arranged. Mrs. Morton packed a shelf full of oil stock, "as it," Nell said, "I knew nothing of cooking."

They were up at sunrise and Nell waved good-bye as the old carriage drove down the line just as the clock struck six. When the old man returned from the station the baby was bathed and the house in order, and it was only eight o'clock.

"And you very much rushed today, father?" she asked. Her head was cooing on one side.

"Why?" he asked, as he smiled into her face.

"It would be such fun to have a celebration all to ourselves down by the river."

He thought a moment. "I think we could get the wheat stacked by eleven, you could have the man's dinner ready then and we could leave. He will begin cutting in the ten-acre field this afternoon."

"Good!" exclaimed Nell. "I'll make a potato salad and we'll have a bonfire for bacon and coffee."

"Bacon sandwiches are good eating," the old man was pleased with her enthusiasm. "We can have a good rest and start back in plenty of time for the milking that I can't around in the grass on a blanket, and when he feels like a nap we can put him on the buggy cushions."

"I'm afraid he'll roll off," objected Nell.

"No! I'll tie up a board across the front to keep him in. That's the way Dick used to sleep when we were driving and I stopped to feed the horse," chuckled Mr. Morton.

When the men had stacked the last load of wheat Nell had the hot dinner ready, and the buskins were packed in the old carriage, so there was nothing to do but get in and drive off. It was a happy trio that took the old river road that day.

Letters May Be Addressed To Mrs. Thompson, in Care of The Gazette.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: (1) Will you please print a recipe for a good hair shampoo that is to be used with soft water? My hair gets very dry and so I wash it occasionally with soft water to keep it fluffy.

(2) Also tell me how peroxide and ammonia are used for bleaching the hair. Is ammonia injurious to the skin?

BIG BROWN EYES.

(1) A shampoo suited to brunettes is made by beating two yolks of raw eggs into half a pint of clear, adding a gill of water. This is thoroughly rubbed over without more water, until the shampoo has been worked in. A cleansing mixture adapted to light hair, that brightens without dyeing, is made from equal parts of dried rhubarb and strained honey, steeped for twenty-four hours in three parts of white wine. At the end of that period the mixture, which should have been tightly covered, must be strained, and the head and long hair entirely covered with it. The preparation should stay on for at least half an hour, and until dry. It then must be washed off in clear water, with a little bicarbonate of soda in the final rinse. If you find that this shampoo is drying to your hair, leave out the soda in the rinse. Either hard or soft water may be used with these shampoos.

which a comb may be thrust, or into a large shallow one suited to the brushes of a brush. A comb or an agent for applying will make a more even finish, but a brush is less apt to wet the scalp, and great effort must be made to keep the head and skin untouched by the application.

Do not try ammonia as a bleach, and I would advise you to leave your hair alone. Dear Mrs. Thompson: (1) We are two girls aged sixteen and seventeen. We live in a small town in the East and have no sister parties, but we have no older sisters nor brothers to go with us. Would it be all right to go with a boy friend?

(2) Is it considered proper for two girls to go to a party and consider the use of peroxide. Peroxide gives the hair an unnatural, straw shade. Both the shampoos I mentioned give the hair a very pretty color.

(3) What shall we do if when we refuse to permit some boys to walk home from church with us they follow us? We have been bothered in this way and, greatly resent it.

E. E. R. C. (1) If your parents approve of the parties and do not object to your going with boys, I think it would be all right. (2) It is not considered proper. (3) Pay no attention to the boys and they will soon get tired of bothering you.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I have been keeping company with a nice fellow with no bad habits for over a year. He lives in another town and when he comes to my town he never telephones or writes, but comes to see me again. Yet when I meet him he is anxious to come along with me. Do you think he cares for me?

SISTER. The man may not realize it, but annoying it is to you to have him act the way he does. Have something else to do when he wants to go with you and he may want to see you badly enough to make a date at a certain time. Try this a few times and if he does not set a definite time to see you, he cannot be very deeply interested in you.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: Would you advise me to go with a stinky fellow? THE SLENDER GIRL. Not unless he has redeeming characteristics.

Household Hints

Marshmallow Candy—Take two cups of sugar and eight tablespoons of boiling water. On this add one cup of two tablespoons No. 3 gelatin and eight tablespoons cold water. When contents of two pans are thoroughly dissolved, pour together, beat until stiff and flavor. Have ready square pan sprinkled thickly with powdered sugar, pour in part of mixture. Add rest of the mixture one-half of coloring, beat until stiff, then add cold water (makes a delicate pink); pour on top of the other mixture sprinkled with sugar, when cold cut in squares. This recipe never fails.

Reliable Fudge Recipe—One cup granulated sugar, one-sixth cup corn syrup, one-fourth cup milk, one square chocolate, or four teaspoons cocoa, one tablespoon butter, one teaspoon vanilla. Cook sugar, syrup, and chocolate together until it bit hardens in a cup of cold water, then add butter and vanilla. Beat and put into buttered pans.

THINGS WORTH KNOWING. When peeling vegetables or preparing fruit, protect the ball of the thumb and the first finger on the right hand from cuts by putting on each a strip of adhesive plaster. This is waterproof, costs ten cents a spot, which will last all summer for this purpose.

To Finish Ends of Silken Cloth. Take a piece of new silk and crochete edge, using single stitch and catching well into felt. It is far better than unfinished or the impossible hem.

For Red Ants—Sprinkle places with black pepper. They will leave almost immediately.

THE TABLE. Fresh Fruitcake—One large cup sugar blended with one heaping tablespoon butter; add a good cup of blackberries, mash well through the sugar and butter; then add two eggs and one-half cups milk, two and one-half teaspoons baking powder and enough flour to make a fairly stiff batter. Bake in three layers and frost while still warm. (Any berry may be used in season.) A very good frosting for the above is as follows: Beat Cream Frosting. Two cups confectionery sugar, beating tablespoon of butter; blend till there are no lumps; add one teaspoon vanilla and about three tablespoons warm cream. Mix well and spread generously.

Cream Cake—Beat two eggs until very light, add one cup sugar, pinch of salt and one teaspoon desired; beat thoroughly, then stir in one cup sweet cream; beat until sugar is dissolved, then add three level cups flour mixed with two heaping teaspoons baking powder. Beat again until light and bake in two layers. This cake may be varied in many ways by adding a cup of dried fruit of any kind, desired, or by the addition of one-half cup shredded chocolate, or grated chocolate; or it may be made a spice cake. The plain batter also makes excellent cookies or doughnuts by adding flour to make a soft dough. This is both good and cheap.

Prune Kuchen—Two cups flour, two tablespoons sugar, one-half teaspoon salt, two teaspoons baking powder, three-fourths cup milk, one egg, one-fourth cup butter, one-half pound prunes, two tablespoons brown sugar, powdered cinnamon to taste. Sift flour and baking powder, add sugar and salt, then rub butter in well. Beat up the egg, add the milk and stir in the dry ingredients. Turn into shallow pan which was buttered. Have prunes cooked and stones removed. Press the dough. Sprinkle with brown sugar and cinnamon and bake twenty-five minutes. Cut in squares and serve hot.

Rhubarb Pie—Pour boiling water over rhubarb, let stand about fifteen minutes, pour off water. Add one cup sugar, one tablespoon flour, one egg (beat up with part of sugar), one orange sliced and grated rind. Paste strip of cloth over edge of pastry to keep in juice.

Date Surprise—Put one tablespoon butter, one cup sugar and one quart milk in saucepan and bring to boiling point. Add four tablespoons cornstarch moistened with cold milk and cook eight minutes, stirring constantly. Add one cup dates, pitted and chopped, one-half teaspoon vanilla extract and teaspoon almond extract. Mix and pour into sherbet glasses. When cold decorate with stoned dates.

Pleasant Salt Pork with Cream Gravy—A delightful old-fashioned and almost forgotten dish that will be appreciated. Dip thin slices of salt pork in flour or corn meal and fry until crisp. To make the gravy take one spoonful of flour to

FASHIONABLE WEDDING USES SPRINT CEREMONY

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.] Ocean Park, Cal., Aug. 17.—With ceremony never before seen outside the Pacific Coast, Selma E. Easton, belle of Etah, Greenland, was married here to Mr. Kauvechna, wealthy merchant of that place, by the Rev. Baker P. Lee, pastor of a fashionable Los Angeles church.

The bride and groom are both members of an Eskimo colony here. The first feature of their wedding was the issuance of invitations inscribed on the skins of short haired seals. In these "bids," Mr. Kauvechna modestly named himself as being the richest man in the world, his only treasure being measured only in terms of codfish, blubber and whale oil. He sent these invitations to the mayors of all cities near Ocean Park.

On the day of the wedding the couple as joined by Rev. Lee in the most approved, legal American fashion. But that was only the beginning.

Next Mr. Kauvechna had to overhaul his bride in a footrace. Until he had done that, they were not wed. In the estimation of the Esquimaux, the race was on. The bridegroom sprinted, skirted, ducked and dodged—right into his arms!

GRAVE MUNICIPAL PROBLEM CONFRONTS CALIFORNIANS

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.] Hillsborough, Cal., Aug. 17.—Just because a horse which dropped dead here on the street happened to fall with its front feet in San Mateo and its hind legs in Hillsborough, these two cities faced what threatened to become a civil war.

A whirlwind of laws, health ordinances, attachments, communications and legal technicalities raged about the body of the horse until the residents near were compelled to ignore the law and regain comfort by having the carcass hauled away.

The location of the boundary line between the two cities was first in doubt. After considerable measuring—away from the horse—W. C. Hammett, who acts as city engineer for both municipalities, declared that the line cut the animal's body in half. Then the San Mateo health officer held that the animal belonged to Hillsborough because it was just coming from there and the Hillsborough city health officer claimed that it belonged to San Mateo because that city was its destination.

After some verbal pyrotechnics in which some high class legal talent was consulted, each health department agreed to move its half of the carcass.

Then came the real complication. Sheriff Michael Sheehan held an attachment on the animal which belonged to R. N. Fulton, a contractor. Both health departments agreed that he alone was liable for its removal.

While this point was still in dispute, the residents living near, decided that the carcass had been there altogether too long and had it removed at the cost of $7.50. Now the storm rages over the bill of $7.50 which is still unpaid.

FREE AGRICULTURAL SCHOOLS FOR CHILDREN OF RUSSIAN SOLDIERS

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.] Petrograd, Aug. 17.—A widespread system of free agricultural and colonies for the children of soldiers killed or severely wounded in battle has been started by Imperial ukase.

The immediate management and control of the schools is to be in the hands of the local Zemstvos, which will provide also a part of the funds for their support. Other sources of income are charges upon monasteries, church charities and agricultural societies, and the state will give grants of money as needed.

The aim of the new institution is to train the orphan children in the same station of life as their parents. Children of both sexes up to the age of seventeen will be received. The schools will be under the general supervision of the Minister of Agriculture.

ENGLAND WOULD HIRE WOMEN TO MAKE SHELLS

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.] London, Aug. 17.—A scheme to employ women who have received scientific education for shell making is now forming in the ministry of munitions. The making of munitions is highly technical and the scientists are badly needed. Many women have studied chemistry and done chemical research for years for no other object.

TODAY'S BEAUTY HINTS

To whiten and beautify the complexion permanently we have found no better preparation than a lotion made by dissolving four ounces of borax in a half pint of hot water, then adding two teaspoonfuls glycerine. This removes any pimples, shiny, muddy or sallow appearance, and will make anyone's skin clear, smooth and velvety. It does not show or rub off like powder; in fact, it seems a part of the skin; and for removing tan and freckles is unequalled.

It is necessary to shampoo more frequently in the warmer weather because of excessive dust and the fact that the head perspires more and is usually more exposed to the weather. The easiest to use and quickest drying shampoo that we can recommend to our readers can be prepared very cheaply by dissolving a teaspoonful of canthox, obtained from your druggist, in a cup of hot water.

This rubbed into the scalp creates a thick lather, soothing and cooling in its action, as well as very beneficial to scalp and hair. After rinsing, the scalp is fresh and clean, while the hair dries quickly and evenly, developing a bright luster and a soft fluffiness that makes it seem very heavy.—Advertisement.

NO COMPLETE SOLUTION CAN ENGLAND DEVISE FOR COTTON PROBLEM

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.] London, Aug. 17.—"There is no such thing as a complete solution of the cotton problem," declares the Times in a long article discussing the purchase of the American crop by Great Britain, and then the "rationing" of necessary supplies to neutrals under strict government supervision.

"German has as her near neighbors," explains the Times, "the five neutral states of Holland, Denmark, Norway, Sweden, and Switzerland. These states have rights which we cannot ignore."

"We may justly complain when we find them importing from 17 to 18 times as much cotton as they need for their domestic consumption and exporting the surplus, or a large part of it, to the enemy, who cannot obtain it elsewhere, who cannot produce it himself, and to whom a constant supply of this indispensable raw material is vital to his military strength."

"What the British government has done is to seek a way out by a series of friendly and private agreements. All cotton entering Holland, for instance, is liable to seizure unless it is consigned to the Netherlands Overseas Trust, which is under heavy bonds to prevent its re-export to Germany. In Sweden, the arrangement has more recently been made with an association of cotton spinners with the object of limiting the importation of cotton into that country to the needs of its domestic manufacturers. This seems to be the only principle that is at once sound and effective on which we can proceed. The arrangement with the Dutch merchants proved a failure, but water-tight largely because it does not expressly limit the amount of cotton that may be imported."

"If we were to establish in each of the northern kingdoms a single receiving agency to which alone cotton might be consigned, and if we were definitely to fix the number of bales that might be imported, using as an index the average domestic consumption (or perhaps a little more) of each country during the three years before the war, we would then have gone

HOUSTON BECOMES A SEAPORT TOMORROW

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.] Houston, Tex., Aug. 17.—Forty Texas beavers, were killed, quartered and dressed today for the big barbecue tomorrow, when Houston becomes the newest of the world's seaports. The first steamship to carry a cargo from New York to Houston will arrive in Houston harbor at noon. She is the Sallio of the Atlantic, Gulf and West Indies Steamship Co.

The people of Houston are ready to make her arrival the occasion for the biggest celebration the city has ever held. The entire populace will gather along the banks of the new ship channel to welcome the freighter. Every person will be invited to eat his fill. Several United States and State officials will be present.

The new waterway reaches from Galveston bay 50 miles inland to Houston, bringing tide water that much nearer the heart of the Lone Star State. The channel is from 25 to 28 feet in depth and wide enough at its narrowest point for two ocean-going vessels to pass. Its construction cost approximately $5,000,000, shared about equally by the United States and a local navigation district. The city of Houston is spending

$3,000,000 more to equip the harbor with terminal facilities of the most modern type. Regular service will be inaugurated tomorrow between Houston and New York, with at least three steamers a month.

A Tale of Civil Strife

Just before sundown, I emerged from the narrow gap and looked down into the broad valley of the Green Briar. It was a scene to linger in the memory, and at my first glance I knew where I was, recognizing the familiar objects outspread before me. Lewisburg lay beyond a spur of hills; invisible from my position, although distant spirals of smoke indicated its presence. A few log huts appeared along the curving road, the one nearest me in ruins, while a gaunt chimney beside a broad stream unbridged was all that remained of a former mill. Beyond this, in midst of a grove of noble trees, a large house, painted white, was the only conspicuous feature in the landscape. I recognized it at once as the residence of Major Harwood.

My gaze rested upon it, as memory of the man, and his fate, surged freshly back into mind. The place had been spared destruction; it remained unchanged—but from that distance it had the appearance of desertion. This condition was no particular surprise, for Harwood's daughter, scarcely more than a girl to my remembrance, would doubtless be with friends, either in Lewisburg or Charleston; and that the mansion, thus deserted, still remained undestroyed was, after all, not so strange, for the major's standing throughout that section would protect his property.

I moved on down the steep descent, losing sight of the house as the road twisted about the hill, although memory of it did not desert my mind. Some odd inclination seemed to impel me to turn aside and study the situation there more closely. Possibly some key to the mystery of Harwood's murder—some connection between him and old Ned Cowan—might be revealed in a search of the deserted home. Fox had said that his party halted at the house on their march east toward Hot Springs. Some scrap of paper might have been left behind in the hurry of departure, which would yield me a clue. If not this, then there might be other papers stored there relating to military affairs in this section of value to the Confederacy. Harwood was the undoubted leader of the Union sympathizers throughout the entire region; he would have lists of names, and memoranda of meetings, containing information which would help me greatly in my quest. An exploration could not be a matter of any great danger, and might yield me the very knowledge I sought.

The great house loomed before me black and silent. If I had ever questioned its desertion its appearance lulled every suspicion. Nor had it escaped unscathed from the despoliation of war. At a distance, gazing from the side of the mountain, I could perceive no change. But now, close at hand, even the intense darkness could not hide the scars left by vandals. The front steps were broken, the door above was tightly closed, yet both the windows to the right were smashed in, sash and all, leaving a wide opening. I crept forward, and endeavored to peer through, but the darkness within was opaque. I was wet through, chilled to the bone, my uniform clinging to me like soaked paper. At least the inside promised shelter from the storm, a chance for a fire, and possibly fragments of food. And I had nothing to fear but darkness.

My revolver was under the flap of my cavalry jacket, dry and ready for use. I brought it forward, within easy grip, and stepped over the sill. My feet touched carpet, littered with broken glass, and I felt about cautiously. My recollection of the interior of the house was vague and indistinct, but I knew a wide hallway led straight through from front door to back, bisected only by a broad stairway leading to the upper story. I groped along the inside wall, found the door at last, standing wide open, and emerged into the hall. The way was clearer here, and there came into my mind the recollection of a bracket lamp, on the wall at the foot of the stairs. My remembrance of the position of the lamp was extremely vague, yet my fingers found it at last, and lifted it from the bracket. The globe contained oil, and in another moment, the light revealed my immediate surroundings.

The total desertion of the place was evident; the destruction which had been wrought was plainly the work of cowardly vandals, who had broken in after the Harwoods left. Convinced of this truth, I proceeded fearlessly to explore, seeking merely the warmth of a fire and food. The library, a large room, the walls lined with bookcases, afforded no encouragement, but I stopped in amazement at the door of the dining room—the light of my lamp revealing a table at which someone had lately eaten; apparently alone. There was a single plate, a cup and saucer, a half loaf of bread, with a slice cut, part of a ham bone, with considerable meat remaining untouched, and a small china teapot. For an instant the unexpected sight of these articles fascinated me, and then my eyes caught a dull glow in the fireplace at the opposite end of the room—the red gleam of a live ember.

The shock of this discovery was so sudden as to give me a strange, haunted feeling. The house had seemed so completely deserted, so desolate, wrapped in silence and darkness, that the very conception that someone else was hiding there came upon me like a blow. Who could the person be? Well, I would find out. Thus far the advantage was mine, for I knew of another presence, while the fellow, whoever he might prove to be, in all probability possessed no knowledge of my entrance.

My heart beat fast, but from excitement, not fear. With cocked revolver in one hand, the lamp in the other, I silently opened door after door, peering into vacant apartments, half thinking every shadow to be a skulking figure. The search revealed nothing; not even further evidence of any presence in the house. The kitchen fire was cold, the cooking utensils clean, and in their proper places.

Satisfied already that the mysterious invader had departed, yet sternly determined now to explore the whole house, and have done with the business, I mounted the back stairway, a strip of rag carpet rendering my steps silent, and, with head above the landing, flashed my light cautiously along the upper hall. There were doors on either side, the most of them open, but the third to the left was closed. There was no transom over it, but the door was far enough away from the radius of my lamp so as to reveal a faint glow of light at the floor line. I set the lamp down on the landing, and crept noiselessly forward to assure myself; it was true, a light was burning within the closed door.

CHAPTER VI.

The Mistress of the House.

I stood with ear pressed against the panel, fingers gripping the butt of my revolver. An ordinary latch held the door closed, and I pressed this, opening the barrier slightly. The movement made not the slightest noise, and gave me a glimpse within.

In front of a small grate fire, her back toward me, snuggled comfortably down in the depths of an easy chair, sat a woman reading. I could see little of her because of the high back of the chair rising between us—only a mass of dark brown hair, a smooth, rounded cheek, and the small white hand resting on the chair arm. I knew vaguely her waist was white, her skirt gray, and I saw the glimmer of a pearl-handled pistol lying on a closed chest at her side. Still she was only a woman, a mere girl apparently, whom I had no cause to fear. The sudden reaction caused me to smile with relief, and to return my revolver silently to the belt. Her eyes remained on the page of the book. I think I would have withdrawn without a word, but at that instant, a draft from the open door flickered her light, and she glanced about seeking the cause. I caught the startled expression in her eyes as she first perceived my shadow; the book fell to the floor, her hand gripping the pistol, even as she arose hastily to her feet. The light was on her face, and I knew her to be Noreen Harwood.

"Who are you? Why are you here?" she asked tersely, a tremor in the voice, but no shrinking in those eyes that looked straight at me.

I moved forward from out of the shadow into the radius of light. It was only a step, but the girl recoiled slightly, the pearl-handled pistol rising instantly to a level with my eyes.

"Stand where you are!" she ordered. "What are you doing, creeping about this house in the dark?"

"Not in the dark exactly," I answered, seeking to relieve the strain, and holding my hat in one hand, as I bowed gravely, "for my lamp is on the stairs."

I marked the quick change of expression in her eyes as they swept over me. There was no evidence of recognition; scarcely more than a faint acknowledgment that my appearance was not entirely unfavorable. Yet surely that alone was all I could hope for. Except for that one chance encounter on the road we had never met since we were children, and she would not likely associate the son of Judge Wyatt with the man now confronting her, attired in the wet and maddy uniform of a Federal lieutenant. Indeed it was better she should not; and a feeling of relief swept over me as I realized her failure to connect me with the past. No memory of my features found expression in her face, as her eyes fell from mine to the clothes I wore.

"You are Union? An officer of—of cavalry? I—can scarcely comprehend why you should be here." Her attitude no longer threatening, the gleaming pistol lowered. "There are Federal troops at Lewisburg, but—but I do not recall your face."

"My being here is wholly an accident," I explained quietly. "I supposed the house deserted, and sought entrance to get away from the storm. There was a broken window—"

"Yes," she interrupted, her eyes again on mine questioningly. "I found that when I came; someone had broken in."

"Robbery, no doubt." "I am not sure as to that. I have found nothing of any value missing. Indeed we left nothing here to attract vandals." She hesitated, as though doubtful of the propriety of further explanation to a stranger. "I—I belong here," she added simply. "This is my home."

"Yes; I supposed as much; you are Miss Noreen Harwood?" Her blue eyes widened, her hand grasping more tightly the back of the chair.

"Yes," she admitted. "You knew my father?"

"Slightly; enough to be aware of the existence of his daughter, and that this was his plantation." "Then you must be connected with the garrison at Charleston?" "No, Miss Harwood; I belong to the Army of the Potomac, and am here only on recruiting service. A word of explanation will make the situation clear, and I trust may serve to win your confidence. I do not have the appearance of a villain, do I?"

"No, or I should not remain parleying with you," she responded gravely. "The war has taught even the women of this section the lesson of self-protection. I am not at all afraid, or I should not be here alone."

"It surprises me, however, that Major Harwood should consent to your remaining."

"He has not consented," she interrupted. "I am supposed to be safely lodged with friends in Lewisburg, but rode out here this afternoon to see the condition of our property. Word came to me that the house had been entered. The servants have all gone, and we were obliged to leave it unoccupied. I was delayed, seeking to discover what damage the vandals had done, and then suddenly the storm broke, and I thought it better to remain until morning."

She laughed, as though amused at her own frankness of speech. "There, I have told you all my story, without even waiting to hear yours. 'Tis a woman's way, if her impulse be sufficiently strong."

"You mean faith in the other party?" "Of course; one cannot be conventional in war times, and there is no one here to properly introduce us, even if that formality was desired. So I must accept you on trust."

"My uniform alone should be sufficient guarantee."

She laughed; her eyes sparkling. "Well, hardly. I imagine you fail to comprehend its really disreputable condition. But—well, you—you look like an officer and a gentleman."

"For which compliment I sincerely thank you. However, Miss Harwood, my story can be quickly told. I am a lieutenant, Third United States cavalry—see, the numeral is on my hat—attached to Heitzelman's command, now at Fairfax Court House. I have recently been detailed to the recruiting service, and ordered to this section."

I found it strangely difficult, fronting her calm look of insistence, to go on. But there was no way of escape. Beyond doubt the sympathy of this girl was with the cause of the North, and if I were to confess myself Tom-Wyatt, and a Confederate spy, all hope of the success of my mission would be immediately ended. Besides I lacked the will to forfeit her esteem—to permit her confidence in me to become changed into suspicion.

"Then I will go on," I said more slowly, endeavoring better to arrange my story. "I picked up a guide at Fayette, but the officer in command there could spare no escort. The man who went with me must have been a traitor, for he guided me south into the Green Briar mountains. Last night at dusk we rode into a camp of guerillas."

Dinner Stories

"That pest who lives next door to me has a habit of starting up his lawn mower at 8 o'clock in the morning."

"Spoils your beauty sleep, eh?" "Not only that, but my daughter complains that she can't practice her music lesson with all that racket going on."

Willie, at a party given by his sister, was allowed to participate in the snapdragon game and sat amid a band of beautiful girls of nineteen or so.

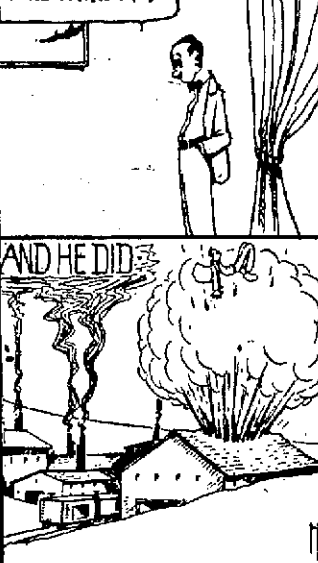

The lights went out, the usual grabbing of favors began, and then, when the lights went up again, Willie was to be seen crying bitterly. "What's the matter, Willie? Didn't you get anything?" a lady asked. "No," sobbed Willie spitefully. "As soon as it got dark that consarned man with brown whiskers—hoo, hoo—he grabbed my hands and did not stop kissing them till the lights went up again."

Some time ago a business man had occasion to see a theatrical manager, and on being admitted to the stage just at the conclusion of the play he noticed that the leading lady seemed to be in a state of wild excitement.

"Your beautiful star seems to be somewhat disturbed," said the business man. "What seem to be the trouble?"

"She is disturbed," answered the manager. "She got only nine bouquets over the footlights tonight. 'Gee Whizz!' was the amazed rejoinder of the other. 'Weren't nine enough?' " "No," was the calm response of the manager. "She paid for ten."

Merely "Oil" Won't Do Here

Consider running your motor without any lubricant. That is only a much quicker way to ruin it than to run it with a poor oil. It takes longer, that is all.

An oil that does any damage has no place in any car, for the function of a lubricant is to protect friction surfaces. The ease of running—easy action and full power—simply goes along with this protection.

Some oils are better than others, but only the best should be used. Anything less is injurious.

The question is—Which are the best oils?

Polarine

is made in the largest plant of its kind in the world. Here is every known facility, collected after years of experience, for the production of the perfect oil. Here is a great laboratory. Here are chemical specialists—experts who have spent years working out lubricating problems of all kinds. Their prestige is at stake on every one of their recommendations.

Polarine is their recommendation for all standard makes and types of motor cars, motor trucks and motor boats in use today. No better oil can be made, yet Polarine costs no more than poorer oils. Our profits come from volume, for we are selling Polarine at the rate of 7,000,000 gallons yearly. Use an oil about which you know all the facts. All first class dealers, garages and filling stations can supply you with Polarine. Insist on getting it.

LETTER IS RECEIVED FROM JOSEPH DUTTON

FATHER JOSEPH TELLS OF SAD NEWS RECEIVED OF NORCROSS'S DEATH.

INTERESTING STORIES

Tells of His Failure to Answer Many Letters He Has Received in Past Year.

In the following letter, received from Father Joseph Dutton, the writer tells of the sad news conveyed to him of the death of the late Capt. Norcross. Other interesting stories of various incidents are told. The letter is as follows:

Kalawao, Molokai, Hawaii.

July 26, 1915.

Running over the letters and memoranda in your package, it is evident I'm not doing a full part. In fact this seems true, not only as to Janesville, but as to the full range of correspondence. Have for some time noted this, likewise as to the character and solid worth of all those who write me. If this is highly gratifying as to the men it is particularly so as to the women, of those about my own age also their delight and grand children. In this time of wonderfully comic dressing, as seen in the fashion plates, styles gone mad, as one may say, comparison is easy. It has been highly gratifying for me to note in the numerous photographs sent, that, without exception, all are decently, nicely and sensibly dressed.

This topic seems almost frivolous, considering the motive that prompted me in writing you. I did, however wish to say, at the beginning, that I'm ashamed to appear so greatly in debt to these splendidly faithful correspondents. In many cases, I find from four to ten lovely, highly edifying letters written since any has come from me. These letters are wholesome and in every way good. It is fair for me to say that I appreciate them very highly, as I ought. If, in the past ten or fifteen years (perhaps twenty-five years, would be more accurate), I have often failed to reply becomingly, it has never been so through my own wish or desire. And I'm willing to be ashamed, when not able, through circumstances, to do my own part better in order to have the powerful aid that interested noble and honest friendship brings. And I'm wishing ever so much to thank, from my heart, every one of these generous, highly valued correspondents.

In beginning this letter the greater part of above expression was not thought of. It has come forth of its own motion. Shall add here that I hope to do better as a correspondent, may it please God, and to write some, if not all, of the things asked for by good friends in the past twenty years.

Now about something the Gazette has printed about Capt. Phin Norcross. The news of his death and death came to me as a severe shock. Besides our service together with the 10th regiment, I was at Milton when he was there—before the war, of course and part of the time we were room mates. Since the war, he had been faithful and interesting as a correspondent, while I have been so only in part. Trying to "make good," I mailed him quite a bunch of typing, etc., on 20th inst., not knowing of his death nine days before. This package was addressed to Orlando.

On lines in my mailing book, adjoining the entry of Capt. Norcross, I see now entries of small packages to Capt. Edward and Capt. Wm. Rucker. This reminds me of a souvenir I gave to Capt. Norcross after the war, an autograph book with names gathered before the war of well known people of southern Wisconsin. I remember one thing, passed in or around in a parchment given me by Mr. Norman Wiard. (Norman I think) superintendent of the Novelty works. Can remember just where I was standing in the James Sutherland book store, where it was clerk, when

Mr. Norman Wiard came in and gave it to me for the book, saying it was the bottom part of a patent issued to his father. It bore the signatures of John Quincy Adams, president; Henry Clay, Secretary of State, and Wm. V. R. Attorney General, as I recall the names now.

The book itself, I made in the Sutherland bindery, on second floor over the book store. I worked in this bindery a good part of the time in the first year. Then in wall paper room back of the bindery, and in the store below. About half of this time in store and half at Milton Academy. Before employment by Mr. Sutherland was about a year in the Free Press office, close by the river, on the west side. Filled the Free Press. Before that had been to school at the "Old Academy," west side, beyond our first Wisconsin home, where the "Grand Hotel" is now. Also my mother, a former teacher in Vermont, instructed me nearly all the time.

But the autograph book. You could not buy one so solid. I made it up of heavy material. The only help was that whenever it would naturally pass out of her hands—or any time if she liked the idea, that it go to the Historical society. Think I once suggested this to Capt. Norcross, am not sure. Also the widow that she allow me a small place in her mourning for the passage of this noble character, one for whom I always had a very high respect. May he rest in peace.

I have several letters begun for Janesville friends. When I go through Phin's unanswered letters, I see now it may seem fitting for some of all to go on to the widow. I have two photographs of the Orlando home. One shows the family. I shall write Mrs. Sperry at Orlando about the fatal accident. In her latest letter she told me of having received from Capt. Norcross twenty dollars towards one of her recent charities.

Dr. Wm. Crawford has taken an active interest in the question of electric lights for Clinton, in regard to the proposition as outlined in Mayor W. H. Hughes' article in the Rock Co. Banker. He took up the matter with an official of a town about the size of Clinton and that official's reply makes it appear that the proposition presented to Clinton was entirely too high to be considered. It seems to be a large number of our citizens that when the time comes for Clinton to have electric service—and may it be soon—let us have a municipally owned plant. If that is not possible then a home company, one whose members will have the interest of Clinton at heart.

Mr. Roy Day of Wausau, Wis., was here Friday a guest of his old friend and classmate, A. J. Bossden.

One Insertion of Adv., Located the Owner.

A tourist found an automobile tail light and license plate just outside of Janesville. He knew someone would be mighty anxious to recover it and he also knew the best way of finding the owner. He brought it to the Gazette office and advertised it as found. Al Chilson lost it and before he could place a lost adv. in the Gazette for it after he noticed the loss, the Gazette reached him containing the "Found" adv. Naturally it did not take another insertion for Mr. Chilson to call and claim his own. The daily newspaper is an exchange of information. You lose something and someone else finds it. By means of the newspaper the article is recovered. You have something to sell and some other person needs it. When advertised both parties are brought together.

GREEN COUNTY SWISS HAVE GALA OCCASION

COLONY AT NEW GLARUS OBSERVES ANNIVERSARY OF ITS ORIGIN—IN TWO DAY CELEBRATION.

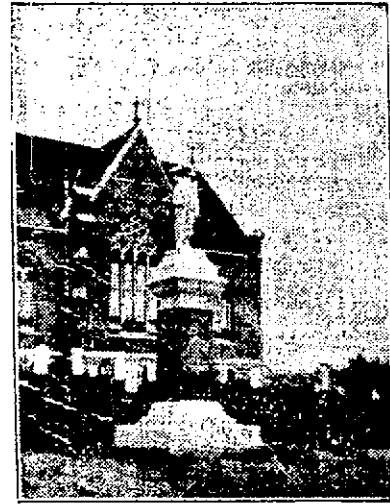

SETTLED 70 YEARS AGO

Economic Conditions at Home Impetus to Exodus to Land Across Sea—Early Trials Many.

Monroe, Wis., Aug. 17.—Yesterday marked the seventieth anniversary of the arrival of the Swiss colony at New Glarus, and the occasion was no less brightly observed. Plans were completed for a two day celebration, Monday being given over to a memorial service for these thrifty pioneers who entered a wilderness and suffered untold hardships in order to find a spot of Wisconsin, and an appropriate monument was dedicated to their memory. Today was given over to amusements, consisting of the native sports of Switzerland.

Governor Philipp Spoke.

The ceremonies of Monday opened in the morning with a service by Rev. G. D. Elliker, following which

Hon. Thomas Luchinger presented the monument to the village and township of New Glarus. The speech of acceptance was made by Village President C. A. Harty. Then with five bands playing in unison, "The Star Spangled Banner," which was also sung by those in attendance, and with a volley from Company H, Wisconsin National Guards, a little girl, the descendant of one of the pioneer families, pulled the cord and the monument was unveiled. A short address by Governor Emanuel L. Philipp followed.

Monument a Fitting Memorial.
The monument unveiled on this anniversary has been erected by the descendants of the pioneers at a cost of practically $6,000, and is a most fitting memorial to the pioneers who left their homes in the beautiful valleys of Switzerland to carve out new ones in the new world, the conditions of coming generations might be bettered. The monument stands practically twenty-two feet in height, the pedestal being surmounted by a life-sized statue of a pioneer, with one hand resting across his forehead as if shading his eyes as he looked out upon the promised land. The front of the monument bears the inscription: "1915. In Memory of the First Settlers of the Swiss Colony, New Glarus, August 16, 1845."

Bears Names of Pioneers.
On the sides of the monument, erected practically on the site of the first log cabin built by the pioneers, are cut in the imperishable marble the names of the heads of the twenty-five families settling at New Glarus. These names are: Oswald Babler, Fridolin Bähler, Jost Becker, Fridolin Becker, Heinrich Buerst, Balthasar Duerst, Fridolin Dier, Heinrich Hosli, Marcus Hosli, Mathias Hosli, Fridolin Straif, Heinrich Aebli, Fridolin Legler, Sr., Fridolin Legler, Jr., George Legler, John Casper Legler, Abraham Schindler, Balthasar Schindler, Mathias Schind, Paulus Kundert, Hilarius Wild, Anton Stauffacher, Jacob Stauffacher, Rudolf Stauffacher and Jost Trumpf.

Eight Pioneers Living.
During the memorial services Monday the eight pioneers still living were the guests of honor. These eight, all practically babes in arms when the colonists arrived, are: Miss Margaret Duerst, Miss Anna Ingeler, Mrs. Catherine Houser, Oswald Babler and Fridolin Legler of New Glarus; Henry Stauffacher of Monroe, Sebastian Duerst of Albany and Adam Schmid of Canton, South Dakota.

Monday afternoon the exercises were held at the camp of the Swiss Rifle club and consisted of music, singing, speeches in German and English by Governor Emanuel Philipp, Judge George Luchinger, Thomas Luchinger and John Luchinger.

Today was given over to amusements, together with a water fight, races, parades, Swiss wrestling, waltzing and Swiss national games and amusements. On a platform near the monument this evening there will be presented a number of living pictures under the glare of powerful colored lights, depicting scenes in the history of the colony. There will be a tableau of William Tell.

Historical Sketch.
The history of New Glarus is unique and interesting. Its origin is recounted for by a combination of commercial depression, crop failures and the cessation of installment of the Swiss mercenaries by France and Germany which in 1845 brought many of the poor of the cantons of Switzerland to the verge of starvation. In no canton were the conditions harder than that of Glarus. The population there had been increasing for a number of years and under the system of the equal division of the land among all citizens the allotments to each were fast becoming too small to support the families. The leading men of the canton of Glarus set about to find means by which this over population and consequent distress could be relieved. It was thought that emigration and care and control under the government would be the best means of relief. A convention was called which appropriated 1,500 florins to send two agents to America to seek and purchase a tract of 1,200 acres, including an area of timber land. The two agents traveled through several states before they came to Wisconsin. They passed through five or six counties in Wisconsin before they were able to find 1,200 acres of unoccupied land in a single tract. At last on the banks of little Sugar river they found that they were able to purchase the 1,200 acres there and 80 acres of timber land two miles to the south. It was considered an excellent location. Springs abounded and the soil appeared good. A great army of money was raised in Glarus to send the emigrants out. A premium on emigration was established by the paying of each departing citizen a sum of money equal to his life share in the lands of the canton.

Exodus Is Started.
On the 10th of April, 1845, 193 persons of all ages and both sexes were collected on the banks of the Linth canal, which runs along the Linth river, a tributary of the Rhine, in the canton of Glarus. They were the colonists who had declared their readiness to venture into the strange, hard land of America, of which they had heard so much. With hearts filled with mingled grief and hope they took leave of friends and fatherland, and when bright hopes of the future started on their long journey. At Rotterdam they contracted for passage on a ship that had been engaged in carrying cotton from New Orleans to Europe. The sea voyage was slow, stormy and tedious, and combined with the uncertain future prospects, was the cause of much depression to all. After forty-nine days they arrived at Baltimore on June 1, where for the first time they were put on railway cars and carried about fifty miles to Columbia, Pa. By canal boats they were taken to St. Louis, arriving there on July 23. Here the false rumor reached them that in penetrating the interior their adventurous agents had been killed by the Indians. After being in great anxiety for two weeks it was resolved that two of the party should go in search of them. They proceeded to Galena, Illinois, and then to Mazon, where they learned that their agents had purchased land in Wisconsin. Word was sent back to St. Louis, and late August 108 persons out of the original 193 arrived on foot at New Glarus, the others having for various causes become discouraged and dropped off along the way. The colonists were sore and weary, and they used to relate that on the last stages of their journey persons whom they met fled at their approach, for bearded, neglected and ragged, carrying axes and tools of every description, as well as bags of provisions, they resembled a band of robbers rather than a party of honest emigrants.

Erected Large General House.
Upon their arrival they united with the predecessors and erected one large general house. This was done partly because of the lateness of the season, and partly because of the economic spirit. It was shanty, 60x50 feet, just wide enough for two rows of sleepers. It was built in a hurry. An excavation had been made in the hillside, the sides were enclosed with boards hauled sixty-two miles from Galena, Ill., and covered with boughs and wild hay. There were no windows and no chimney. Plenty of fresh air came through the cracks between the boards. Here they slept, the cooking being done out of doors, while they hew on the woods and water for their provisions. About a dozen pans and kettles which the colonists brought with them from Switzerland had to do duty for all the families.

Light for Existence.
The colonists arrived late to put any crops in the ground and but for the opportune arrival of $1,000 from their native canton there would have been great suffering the first winter at least. The light for existence was a hard one. For clothes the people were dependent upon what they could earn or find at other places. Many women went to Monroe, sixteen miles distant, and carried their ragged, but in the shape of old clothes for her family, while the men sought work in the lead mines during the winter. In the spring additional cabins were erected. Finally two yoke of oxen were purchased by the colonists which were used in turn by the families, and with their aid and the use of a few borrowed spades the land was broken for the first crop.

Years Without Horses.
For years the colonists were without horses or tools, knew little about agriculture, and were compelled to resort to primitive methods of preparing the soil with sharpened sticks. Nothing but their inability to move away prevented the colonists from returning to Switzerland, where they might at last starve among their old companions. They broke small pieces of ground and raised wheat, which they threshed out with hickory sticks. As soon as they had a surplus they tried to find a market. Wheat sold for 30 cents a bushel in Milwaukee and it cost twenty-five cents to get it there. It was slow business, but they stood it for several years. Little by little they emerged from their poverty. They began to learn American methods of agriculture and their crops became profitable. Farm tools were purchased with community funds.

Dairying Is Introduced.
In 1846 drovers from Ohio brought a lot of cattle to Exeter, then a mining town eight miles east of New Glarus. The colonists became interested once set out to purchase some, and being excellent judges they soon selected the best animals in the herd in sufficient number to give each family one. They cost $12 each and were paid for out of the unexpended balance of the $1,000 aid that had been sent to them from Switzerland. It was the inauguration of the dairy industry which was to be the foundation of the prosperity of New Glarus and which has made it the richest strictly farming community in Wisconsin, if not in the entire United States.

The beginning was certainly discouraging. The colonists were ignorant of all methods of farming, except the care of cows, in which they excelled. Without money, in a strange land, it required firm determination, courage and faith to hold out. The early untimely reports sent back home by the discouraged ones naturally tended for some years to deter others from following, and until 1850 their numbers were not much increased except by the arrival of original colonists who had dropped out of Illinois and Missouri arrived. After that time the railroad came as near as Janesville and there was nearer and better markets, and after the outbreak of the Crimean war caused a rise in wheat, at that time the principal product of the New Glarus colony, a steady stream of emigration was received from Switzerland. In 1855, and that mostly of a class who possessed means with which to buy land and stock and make needed improvements.

Repay Loan With Interest.
At length the long-toiled-for result was realized beyond expectations. Strong and self-reliant, the colony became not only a success but a standing proof that a small amount of money well directed and expended would do better the condition of the honest poor. The money which had been appropriated for the settlers was all repaid with interest in 1855, and in 1861, the city of Glarus having sent the residents of the colony sent $1,250 for distribution among the suffering poor, while another notable donation was made in 1850. The Swiss town of Elm was overwhelmed by the falling of a mountain. Nor were the people of New Glarus lacking in loyalty to their adopted country, for nine years after the outbreak of the civil war, a most remarkable average and one which few communities equaled.

The people of New Glarus are noted for their industry, frugality and economy—qualities which they inherited from their ancestors having from necessity been obliged to practice them for many years. They are noted for their mountainous character of their fatherland. One cannot help observing on entering the community the effect of the qualities in the costly church, the beautiful homes, the great barns and comfortable homes, great barns and numerous other evidences of the prosperity of the people. In no other village in Green county is so much money expended in permanent improvements and the poor commissioner never has any business there.
